

BANKER GONE, POLICE GUARD TREASURE BOX

Caponigri Vanished When Receiver Took Hold of Another Institution.

DEPOSITORS RUSH IN.

Exodus to Europe the Cause of Mulberry Street Bank's Difficulties.

The exodus of Italians from New York during the past few months is responsible for the disappearance of Pasquale Caponigri, a banker, of No. 20 Mulberry street, and the bankruptcy of F. J. Ferrara, another banker of No. 406 East Thirteenth street.

Caponigri vanished on Tuesday morning about the same time that Ferrara's institution passed into the hands of Clarence S. Houghton, of No. 220 Broadway, who had been appointed receiver by Judge Holt, of the United States District Court.

The closing of both institutions has caused no end of excitement and worry among the several thousand depositors in the Italian quarter, and the police have had to be called to prevent angry men and women from breaking down the doors. Both banks are said to hold savings of $300,000.

Caponigri has been in the banking business in this city since 1880. He was known politically and is said to have been a close friend of "Big Tim" Sullivan. He held the dump-trimming privileges up to several years ago and is reported to have made a fortune.

Friends of Caponigri say that his money has been all tied up in real estate ventures and that the heavy withdrawals of home-going Italians left his institution without any cash. They declare that his suspension is only temporary and feel confident that he will reappear and resume his obligations, which are said to be near a quarter of a million.

It is recalled by Caponigri's associates that fourteen years ago, when the Canal Street State Bank failed, of which he was the vice-president, Caponigri assumed full responsibility and paid off every dollar to depositors. This was said to have cost him $40,000.

Charles R. Carruth, of No. 2 Rector street, who is the attorney for Ferrara, says that his client's liabilities amount to $50,000, with assets covering one-half that figure.

"Depositors going abroad," said Lawyer Carruth, "are responsible for the embarrassment of my client. Heavy withdrawals, coupled with numerous unpaid notes, rendered a receiver necessary. In the past the home-going were satisfied to accept a draft for their deposits, but since the recent money scare every depositor has demanded real cash—and they have taken that money out of this country."

The closing of Ferrara's East Thirteenth street bank caused the shutting down of a branch office at No. 126 Central avenue, Brooklyn, and another office in Boston. Ferrara is ill over his failure and stopping with his family in this city, but there is no trace of Banker Caponigri. The police are protecting the latter's office.

ROOT THANKS BRAZIL FOR RECEPTION TO FLEET.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The following exchanges between Mr. Dudley, the American Ambassador to Brazil, and the State Department incident to the visit of Admiral Evans's battleship fleet to Rio de Janeiro were made public at the State Department to-day:

"Petropolis, Brazil.
"Mr. Dudley reports a gratifying reception of the fleet with elaborate official programme by the President and people, the American and Brazilian flags flying together from Monroe Palace. The officers were received and dined by the President and will be given a banquet of 500 covers by Baron Rio Branco on the 20th at which Iray Barboza is to be the chief speaker."
"Department of State, Jan. 15, 1908.
"The Secretary of State requests Mr. Dudley to express to Baron Rio Branco his kind personal regards and the hearty appreciation of the American Government and himself of the cordial hospitality with which the American fleet is being received by the President and the Government of Brazil and is delighted to feel that there is extended the same friendship so generously extended to him in 1907."

The third Boleau Girl Art Calendar, in ten colors, will be distributed through The Sunday World in Greater New York next Sunday.

Arnold, Constable & Co. Annual January Sales

CONTINUED

ALSO AN UNUSUAL SALE OF Women's Kid Gloves

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

MOUSQUETAIRE GLACE KID GLOVES, Tans, Grey, Black, White, 16 button length. Regularly $3.75 pair	2.50
12 button length. Regularly $3.00 pair	2.00
2 Clasp GLACE KID GLOVES, Spring Shades, also Black and White. Regularly $1.50 pair	1.00
3 button CHAMOIS GLOVES, Natural color and white. Regularly $1.00 pair	.65

Broadway & 19th Street.

Women Who Drink Are Imperiling Future of Country, Says Dr. Aked

Habit Copied From English Cousins Is Undermining American Society.

YOUNG GIRLS VICTIMS

Vice Will Be Passed On to Future Generations as a Blood Taint.

By Rose Tillotson.

Dr. Aked and I had an exhilarating time over alcoholic beverages. Not the really naughty kind. Oh, dear me, no! We only dined with the delights of the stimulating fluids through the medium of conversation.

I confess it was in trepidation that I called on the English clergyman to ask him concerning his recent statement that drinking in America is on the increase, for alcoholic interviews are not my forte, and I feared that the pastor of the fashionable Fifth Avenue Baptist Church would sternly suppress my attempt to interview him on the subject.

But Dr. Aked told me all about the gentle art of drinking, of tipping and its attendant delights and evils.

Have you ever met Dr. Aked and talked with him? It was the first time I had ever seen the eminent doctor of divinity, and his strong personality impressed me the moment he shook my hand. Dr. Aked is a big man physically, and it seems to me he is a big man mentally, too.

"His appearance is that of the typical Englishman with fair hair and blue eyes, but his manner is far more enthusiastic and democratic than is usually the case with Britons."

Society Women Set Bad Example.

"So you want to know about tipping," he asked, when I told him the purpose of my call. "I don't know much about it," he continued, "but couldn't you help me out a bit and give me some information?"

I assured Dr. Aked that tipping was not among my accomplishments, and that it was I who was out on the trail of intoxicating information. So we settled down in his study to discuss the increased use of alcohol in this country.

"Drinking among American men and women is steadily on the increase," he said. "At least, it seems so to me."

When I first came to this country, in 1890, intoxicants were used very moderately, but in the present day we see them used incessantly. One would not believe it possible that a country which fourteen years ago was extremely temperate could develop so strong a passion for drinking in so short a time."

"Do you think that the tipping habit is prevalent in all classes?"

"No, it is only in the upper classes that I perceive this increased use of intoxicants. What is called society is setting a very bad example for its poorer brothers. And it is not only the men. The women, too, have become addicted to the habit. Everywhere you will see refined and sweet women drinking without a thought as to the evil effects of the alcohol or the bad habits they are falling into."

"Young girls, too," continued Dr. Aked, earnestly, "no longer regard alcohol as a beverage with honor. They, too, imbibe as freely as their elders. I warn the American woman that that way madness lies. For that is the way of destruction, travelled by all the victims that God has sent down to hell."

But English Women Set the Pace.

"Though the American woman drinks intoxicants, she does not compare with her English cousin in that respect. She is following in her footsteps, but at a very moderate pace. On the most corrupt days of old Rome there was no such mad passion for alcohol among the women as there is to-day in England. In the saloons, over there we call them public houses, one finds more women than men. It is the worst vice in English society."

"The American woman should remember that the future of our nation depends upon her, and for this reason she should not indulge in drinking. Drunkenness is hereditary, and if the present generation develop a passion for intoxicants, their children will suffer in consequence. The custom is increasing. It should be stopped before it goes too far."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

REV. DR. AKED.

PHOTO BY RUCKWOOD, N.Y.

generation develop a passion for intoxicants, their children will suffer in consequence. The custom is increasing. It should be stopped before it goes too far."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen little or nothing of the working man or woman. From what I have heard, however, I think that the drinking habit is not confined to the wealthier classes, but it is those people who are responsible for the widespread vice."

"I have come to these conclusions regarding the increased use of intoxicants wholly from personal observation. I cannot discuss the conditions existing in the poorer classes, for I have seen